The lagoons of 'Grand Bagnas' and 'Petit Bagnas' were designated as a nature reserve since 1983 and have been a Natura 2000 site since 2010. Their main interest lies in the diversity of their bird life: nearly 250 species, including stilts, ducks, flamingos, herons, birds of prey and many other migratory species.

Access to the Bagnas national nature reserve is restricted to protect its environment and abundant wildlife. That's why ADENA, the association for protection of the environment and the nature, offers guided tours all along year.
